take the worry out of termite protection... with a little help from Mother Nature

Unlike other termiticides, Biflex is a synthetic pyrethroid modeled on Mother Nature's very effective insecticide 'pyrethrum' which is extracted from the Pyrethrum Daisy. It's safer and more caring to your environment. Biflex solves your termite problems in two ways; not only does it work quickly to KILL ACTIVE TERMITES, it also creates an invisible protective barrier that surrounds your home for at least 10 years! KEEPING TERMITES OUT!

So what exactly is involved?

To create an effective barrier around your home Biflex needs to be applied around external walls and footings. There are a variety of ways this can be done, eg. the injection of the Biflex into the ground around your home at small regular intervals. Sometimes this is injected through footpaths, patios or pavers, however it is now widely recognised that the best and most effective form of protection is trenching around your home.

This involves exposing the footings and removing potential problems like tree roots, clay or other debris, which can be hidden from view under footpaths, etc. The narrow trench is then treated, and the soil in the trench replaced, creating a continuous protective barrier around your home. It is generally not too disruptive to your gardens and is safe for children and pets.

How does it work?

During treatment, the trench is flooded with a large volume of a carefully diluted Biflex solution, the majority of which is water. In much the same way as you would take water with a headache tablet, the water is necessary to facilitate distribution, which means that a Biflex treatment around your home requires far less 'active constituents' than other treatments.

Even with the low dosage rate, Biflex provides the longest protection period of any available termiticide. From an environmental stand point, Biflex barriers are the perfect choice for keeping termites out of your home. Biflex is insoluble in the soil, so the barrier stays exactly where you need it and will not be leached away by rainfall or watering of lawns and gardens. Unlike some products, Biflex is non-systemic, which means garden plants and other vegetation will not translocate the barrier away from the treated area where it is most needed.

How can I be sure?

FMC's strict international product stewardship program ensures that Biflex is manufactured in accordance with the highest International and Australian specifications relating to termite control products. Biflex has been thoroughly tested in areas of severe termite pressure around Australia by independent termite specialists and passed with flying colours in all areas. Biflex has also been approved by the Australian Pesticides and Veterinary Medicines Authority, and complies with the requirements of Australian Standards AS 3660 Series. Most importantly, Biflex brings real 'peace of mind' protection with the knowledge that it will not create health concerns for you, your family or your pets.

At FMC we appreciate that some people can be allergic to prescribed medication and/or a variety of household products such as washing detergents, paints, insecticides or even cosmetics. We also recognise that personal medical conditions need to be taken into account at the time of termite control applications. If you do experience these problems we would recommend you discuss any medical or allergic conditions with your medical practitioner before determining what termite barrier is right for you.

So what does this mean to me?

At FMC, our commitment, in partnership with your termite specialist, is to provide effective control of your termite problems, without disruption to normal home life and with the utmost consideration to you and the environment we share and enjoy with our family and friends. When choosing Biflex you can be totally confident that you are getting the best termite protection available.

now that's peace of mind!
